An entity may make an accounting policy election, for leases with terms of 12 months or less, not to recognize assets and liabilities but instead to recognize straight-line lease expense. Balance sheet leases will be classified as either finance or operating, with the difference affecting the pattern of expense recognition in the income statement.

~~New FASB Lease Accounting Standard Changes Effective 2020—~~

A lease is an arrangement under which a lessor agrees to allow a lessee to control the use of identified property, plant, and equipment for a stated period of time in exchange for one or more payments. There are several types of lease designations, which differ if an entity is the lessee or the lessor. The choices for a lessee are that a lease can be designated as either a finance lease or an ...

The new lease accounting standard, released by FASB in early 2016, represents one of the largest and most impactful reporting changes to accounting principles in decades. The standard itself is voluminous, and digesting it will be a major task for companies, auditors, and accountants. In part 1 of a two-part series, the authors discuss the changes to the definition and classification of different types of leases and detail the accounting process for lessees.

~~Accounting for Leases Under the New Standard, Part 1—The—~~

Accounting standards require lessees to recognize a right of use asset and associated lease liability for almost all leases. Lessors, on the other hand, are required to classify leases into operating leases and finance leases and recognize finance lease receivable only in respect of finance leases.
