Dylan Dog is an eccentric private investigator who takes on supernatural cases that the police can't or won't take. With his assistant Felix he hunts zombies and serial killers that raid the streets of London. Dylan is certainly not a typical character in the genre, especially when compared to the comic book heroes from the USA.

My favorite Dylan Dog story was about a woman whose abusive husband had committed suicide and his ghost started leaving gifts around her house, like severed heads in the fridge. Dylan had to investigate the case and deal with her trauma. Sounds an awful lot like my dating life now.

Dylan Dog is a supernatural catalyst, so not only is he always in the middle of weird events, but often he unwillingly and without realizing it triggers supernatural events. Often Hell's "directors" take advantage of that and "use" him for their purpose.

Just as Adrian Mole defined me aged 13¾, Dylan Thomas' 'Portrait of the Artist as a Young Dog' did so at 18.
