Typical aesthetic illusion maintains a position that is closer to the pole of immersion rather than to the pole of distance. While aesthetic illusion is not restricted to an effect of works of art, the term "aesthetic" is justified by the fact that it etymologically gestures towards a quasi-perceptual quality of the imaginative experience involved and implies an awareness, typical of the reception of art, that "illusion" is triggered by an artifact rather than (an, e.g., magic) reality.

Unlike delusional or hallucinatory states, this immersion is "counterbalanced by a latent rational distance, which operates owing to the culturally acquired awareness of the difference between representation and reality" (52). Wolf discusses at length the typical features of illusionist works and how they contribute to the effect of illusion.
